Diné. Sinom. Nuwuvi. Pipa Aha Macav. Moore 4 The People

My name is Jaymee Moore and I am running for a seat on our Tribal Council. As a voice of the next generation and a leader in my own right, I am here to work toward Moore 4 The People of the CRIT community. My parents, Jonathan Moore and Lynnette Stevens, and my grandparents, Ronald and Geneva Moore and Milton Stevens and Bonita Eddy, instilled in me the importance of community service, cultural heritage, education, and kindness. All of these qualities make me a strong candidate for the vital role of Tribal Council, especially in these trying times.

The discipline I achieved as a part of obtaining my Bachelor's degrees from Northern Arizona University, massage therapist certification, and apprenticing as a master beader have prepared me for this role. I have been trained to read, write, and interpret policy; to heal and hold the body; to have the utmost patience and attention to detail; and most importantly, to listen to people.

These tools are essential to making our dreams for the community come to fruition. For me, these dreams include: advocating for education, health, and natural resources; eliminating barriers for our people to work in our government; increase productivity in tribal departments; treating our tribal employees well; expanding enterprise development; and ensuring the voices of the people lead.

When I say Moore 4 the people, I mean it. Moore of the good, Moore of the culture, Moore of what feeds, and Moore of what will sustain all the generations to come. Please cast a vote for Moore and let's make our dreams a reality. Thank You. Asquali.
